

TOGETHER FOR NATURE

We've had an impactful— perhaps even “historic”— first year carrying out the goals and vision of our five-year strategic plan.

The plan is a roadmap for our future: expanding our effectiveness in education, advocacy, habitat restoration and protection, wildlife rehabilitation, and our presence as an inspiring place for all. We're pleased to share major advancements in increasing our impact for people and wildlife, driven by the knowledge that now, more than ever, Oregonians must join together to protect our environment for the benefit of all who live here.

First, we are proud to announce the completion of our new Marmot Cabin, a 3,200-square-foot educational facility on our expansive wildlife sanctuary in Sandy, Oregon. The new lodge is the culmination of our first capital campaign in over two decades, tripling our overnight lodging capacity, offering a large indoor education space for year-round programming, and increasingly ADA-accessibility. Its size, accessibility, and ideal East County location will make our immersive education programs available to more communities than ever before. It could not have happened without the generous support of our community and the Miller family. Thank you.

Our statewide conservation program also passed an important milestone this summer, with the arrival of our first year-round field coordinator in Eastern Oregon. We're expanding our work monitoring and restoring critical bird habitat at Malheur National Wildlife Refuge and beyond, and strengthening our partnerships and educational opportunities in Harney County. At our Wildlife Care Center, we are readying ourselves for an expansion of our facility. We're working with architects to ensure that our upgraded Care Center improves our ability to both treat injured and orphaned wildlife, and educate the public on how they can reduce hazards in their community.

The staff also delved into a year-long effort to understand how issues of race, inclusion, and equity are essential to achieving our goal of becoming a more welcoming and relevant organization for all. By examining what inclusion means, and the importance of applying an equity lens to our work, we can better understand and address the barriers some experience when they engage with Portland Audubon and the broader conservation movement.

Our community can take pride in our achievements over the past year, as well as the building blocks that will allow us to carry out the exciting and expansive vision of our strategic plan. We thank you for making this work possible, and welcome your ideas on how we can continue to improve the vital work that we do.

Inspiring people to love and take action to restore, protect, and enjoy wildlife and wildlife habitat.

Whether we're working collaboratively to restore critical bird habitat in Eastern Oregon, connecting kids to nature, rehabilitating wildlife, or infusing green policies into the DNA of the Portland metro area, our goal remains the same: to inspire all people to love and take action to restore and protect nature.

Since 1902, Portland Audubon has brought people together for nature. Our community, made up of dedicated members, volunteers, activists, partners, donors, youth and adult learners, backyard habitat builders, Birdathoners, and community scientists, cares deeply about ensuring that Oregon is a healthy place for current and future generations — human, avian and beyond.

Thanks to the work and generosity of thousands of people, we have taken giant strides forward this past year in nature education, environmental advocacy, wildlife rehabilitation, building a more inclusive community, and strengthening our partnerships with organizations throughout the state.

Each commitment and achievement outlined in this annual report shows a step towards a future where all Oregonians can be empowered to steward our magnificent forest, marine, desert, wetlands, grasslands, mountain, urban and sage-steppe habitat. A future where the voices of all people are heard, valued, and included so that social justice is woven into the fabric of the environmental movement. We are grateful for all who walk with us, challenge and inform us, help us to welcome more people into our community, and work to protect Oregon's wild places.

EDUCATION Adult & Youth Programs

Thanks to the generosity of our community, we completed our first capital campaign in 25 years to build the new Marmot Cabin.

Marmot Cabin

Bordering the Bull Run Watershed, and nestled in our 91-acre Miller Wildlife Sanctuary, this 3,200 square-foot facility will triple our overnight capacity to connect more kids to nature and help us reach new audiences.

The new Marmot Cabin will be a huge leap forward for our Outdoor School and camp programming, providing us with ADA accessible facilities, year-round education opportunities, ample sleeping quarters and bathrooms, bird-safe windows, a geological fireplace that tells Oregon's history, and a welcoming place to be able to teach all kids about the natural world.

Instilling a lifelong love of nature.

By connecting youth and adults to the natural world through camps, classes, school-programs, bird outings, ecotours and more, we instill a lifelong love of nature, prompting current and future generations to enjoy and protect Oregon's native wildlife and their habitat.

Sanctuaries

NW PORTLAND SANCTUARY

Each year, 40,000 people visit our 150-acre sanctuary to hike four miles of trails, visit our Wildlife Care Center, shop at the Nature Store, explore the Interpretive Center and enjoy education and conservation events.

10 MILE CREEK

Our 216-acre 10 Mile Creek Sanctuary holds the largest intact stand of coastal temperate rainforest of Sitka Spruce and Western Hemlock in the lower 48 states and is home to the Federally listed Marbled Murrelet and Northern Spotted Owl.

CONSERVATION

Making Oregon a safe and healthy place for people and wildlife.

Whether it's advocating for the threatened Marbled Murrelet, working collaboratively with partners in Eastern Oregon to restore high desert habitat, conducting community science surveys along the Oregon Coast, or advocating for policies that protect birds and fight climate change in our cities, every step we take contributes to our larger vision: to make Oregon a safe and healthy place for people and wildlife.

Both today, and 100 years from now.

BACKYARD HABITAT PROGRAM

The Backyard Habitat Certification Program expanded to include 11 cities within Multnomah and Clackamas Counties, restoring a combined 1,257 acres of urban habitat.

COMMUNITY SCIENCE

From Brown Pelicans to endangered Snowy Plovers to the Vaux's Swifts, our community scientists worked along the entire coast and in the Portland Metro Area to gather data to help protect birds.

Initiatives

PORTLAND CLEAN ENERGY INITIATIVE

Working collaboratively with community groups, led by communities of color, Portland Audubon helped get Portland Clean Energy Initiative on the November ballot, both fighting climate change and promoting social justice.

MARBLED MURRELET

Portland Audubon, alongside other conservation groups, filed a lawsuit against the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) Commission for failing to uplist the Marbled Murrelet from threatened to endangered under the Oregon Endangered Species Act.

CENTRAL CITY 2035 PLAN

Thanks to years of work and the voices of our activists, Portland City Council adopted the following green policies into the Central City 2035 Plan, a long-range plan shaping the development and growth of the city's central core: a new green roof mandate, an expanded greenway, bird-safe building requirements, river restoration goals, and a new green loop park connecting Portland's east and west side.

LIGHTS OUT & LIGHT POLLUTION

Wrapping up our first year of "Take the Pledge to Go Lights Out" we now have 650 enrolled homes that have pledged to reduce unnecessary lighting and fight light pollution. Our second annual Lights Out event had wide participation from iconic Portland buildings and residences.

HARNEY COUNTY EXPANSION

We expanded our work in Eastern Oregon to include a full-time staff person to build relationships, work with partners, and continue our work to restore critical bird habitat at Malheur NWR and beyond.

A Charity You Can Trust. Portland Audubon regularly receives Charity Navigator's highest rating of 4 stars. From a financial perspective, over 79% of our funding goes directly into programming. That impressive statistic does not include over $1 million worth of volunteer hours donated annually—35% of our workforce. We are proud to be an efficient, volunteer-empowered organization.
